Material and Technology / Berlin

Architects, designers and producers have more and more innovative materials at their disposal today, and these vary widely in terms of the cultural influences in the country of production, the resources available and the production methods used. More and more frequently we see a rediscovery of traditional manufacturing methods and materials, which - when transferred to the modern digital workplace - offer special design options. Subtle distinctions in the innovation cultures influence producers as they develop new materials solutions, and interior designers as they create sophisticated spaces.
